In this review, we describe a shift that has taken place in the area of developmental suggestibility. Formerly, studies in this area indicated that there were pronounced age-related differences in suggestibility, with preschool children being particularly susceptible to misleading suggestions. The studies on which this conclusion was based were criticized on several grounds (e.g. unrealistic ...

The results of these experiments broadened and confirmed those published in Binet's earlier 1894 article. By studying the suggestibility of normal subjects, he helped to establish a scientific foundation for the psychology of testimony. Indeed, Binet's research on suggestibility in visual memory is similar to much later research.

Memory and Suggestibility in the Forensic Interview ...

Suggestibility is the quality of being inclined to accept and act on the suggestions of others. One may fill in gaps in certain memories with false information given by another when recalling a scenario or moment. Suggestibility uses cues to distort recollection: when the subject has been persistently told something about a past event, his or her memory of the event conforms to the repeated ...

Suggestibility - Wikipedia

Much like implanting memories, suggestibility involves false memories that make their way into your mind even though a particular event that you recall never occurred. The difference is that implanted memories tend to occur after a more active process (someone asking leading questions), while false memories that form due to suggestibility are often unintended.
